y Trifles are the Qualities of men as well discovered as by great Actions, because in matters of importance they commonly temperize & cause shame in themselves, but in lesser things they follow ye instrument of their own natures.

Prince ought to grow upon that which is of himself, and not upon that w^ch is of an other, for Government is rather to trust to its own Power, then to others Courtesies.

Content is the Elixer of Life, the true Philosophers Stone which infuses a Golden Tincture into all inferior metals, and turns all base ones by refining them to a good temper.

In the Contest of Affaires, you may shew a brave Spirit in going on.
But your Wisdome will most appeare in timing your Retreats and how to come off: for there is such inconstancie in all humane affaires, that that Course seemeth best which hath most passages out of it.

Factions in States never hold long their greatnes, for if they be not suppressed by the power of the State; they will be united by some distempers rising in y^e own party.

There are Some who hold it the chiefest honour to be thought the wonders of their times, which if they attain unto, 'tis but of condition of Monsters, much admired, but more abhorred.

'Tis the employment of a great soul rather to do things worthy to be admired, than to admire what himself hath done.

No man is content with his owne condition though it be best, nor dis satisfied with his wit though it be the worst.

Be not an abetter of the prevailing Faction nor an aſſerter of the Opinions in Faſhion though it be the way to wealth and honour: value no man because he is of this or that Opinion; but esteem every one that walks according to y^e^ rules of piety and Justice

When you have a present good in the post that may turn to advantage, decline it not for the importunity of others, if you do, you will make work for repentance, & the tattlers of the world be your (w)amperers, but you sit the Conquer.

It is a harder thing to avoid Censure than to gaine Applause, for this may be done by one great or wise Action in an age, But to avoid Censure, a man must pass his Life without saying or doing one ill or foolish Action. a b c d d e

In all matters of Counsel the good and prudent part is to take things as they are;
since the past cannot be recald to propose remedies for present evils, and provisions against future events
